Accessibility Standard for Transportation

The RRDSAB is not a provider of specialized or public transit and does not license taxicabs, therefore, the requirements of the Accessibility Standard for Transportation does not apply.

For Information Purposes Only:

The Accessibility Standard for Transportation will make it easier for people to travel on specialized and public transit and in taxicabs in Ontario, including persons with disabilities, older Ontarians and families traveling with children in strollers.

Requirements of the Transportation Standard include:

- Verbal and visual announcements to notify route, direction, destination and major stops;
- Not charging people with disabilities a higher fare or a fee to store their wheelchairs, canes, walkers, etc.; and
- Repairing accessibility equipment as soon as possible and accommodating people with disabilities until the equipment is repaired.

Requirements for those to whom this standard applies will be phased in between July 2011 and 2017.
